Popular on Time Out[title] GRAMMY-winning duo Twenty One Pilots have officially announced their new album, Clancy, set for release on May 17, 2025, through Fueled By Ramen. Alongside the album announcement, the band revealed their massive Clancy World Tour, which includes stops across North America, New Zealand, Australia, Europe, and the UK. European Tour Dates Twenty One Pilots will begin their European leg of the tour in May 2025, with confirmed dates including: May 8, 2025 – SSE Arena, Belfast May 9, 2025 – 3Arena, Dublin More European dates are expected to be announced soon. The tour is produced by Live Nation, and ticket sales will be available starting April 5, 2025. Fans can participate in a pre-sale beginning April 2 (US/CA) and April 3 (UK/EU/AU/NZ). New Music from Clancy The band has already released “Next Semester”, one of the songs from Clancy, accompanied by a music video directed by Reel Bear Media. Their lead single, “Overcompensate”, has also been making waves, climbing the Alternative Radio charts. What to Expect from Clancy Clancy marks the final chapter in a story that began with their 2015 album Blurryface and continued with 2018’s Trench. The album is co-produced by Tyler Joseph and Paul Meany, and it will be available in multiple physical formats, including deluxe box sets, vinyl variants, CDs, and cassettes. With over 33 billion streams worldwide and millions of tickets sold, Twenty One Pilots continue to push boundaries with their storytelling and sound. Their upcoming tour is expected to be their biggest yet, bringing their immersive world to life for fans across the globe Mon 12 May 2025 15:28, UK At a concert in Manchester on May 11th, a Twenty One Pilots fan was filmed leaving the AO Arena with the band’s drum.The American rock duo, consisting of Tyler Joseph and Josh Dun, are currently on the European leg of their ongoing The Clancy World Tour. They recently stopped in Belfast, Dublin, Paris, Birmingham, Cologne, Amsterdam, Madrid, Barcelona, Zurich and Prague before their Manchester show.For the finale of their current show, the band enters the crowd for the closing track, ‘Trees’. They also spray water and confetti as they drum while their fans hold the instrument, with one member of the Manchester crowd seeing this as an opportunity to take off with the drum. The moment was caught on film, which has since gone viral on social media.”No, I’m taking it,” the female fan can be heard seemingly saying before adding, “Why not?”, after receiving abuse from fellow concert goers who appeared to be incensed at her decision to take the instrument, belonging to the band, home.Another shocked voice from the crowd can be heard saying towards the end of the clip, “Have I just witnessed a crime? Has she actually just stolen a drum?”Sax On Tour, a videographer who travels with Twenty One Pilots on the road, has since confirmed that the band has been reunited with the instrument. He shared an image of the drum in the back seat of a car on Instagram along with the caption, “We have the drum!!!!!! Thank you for all the tags and information. You guys rock!”Twenty One Pilots are yet to comment directly on the incident. Their tour will resume on May 13th at London’s O2 Arena, and they will perform at the iconic venue on two nights. Chart-topping, genre-hopping duo from Columbus, OhioIt’s no backhanded compliment to suggest that Twenty One Pilots have proved that self-promotion can be almost as valuable as musical ability. Right from their earliest days, the Columbus, Ohio band have been utterly present in every way, connecting with fans both IRL and online, crafting engagingly creative music videos. With every shrewd move, the crowds grew bigger and more and more industry heads were turned. Ever-present Tyler Joseph formed the band (also known as TØP or Twenty Øne Piløts) in 2009 with his school friends Chris Salih and Nick Thomas. The trio released their hip-hop influenced, self-titled debut in 2009. By the time they returned with 2011’s Regional At Best, Salih and Thomas had left, replaced by drummer Josh Dun. A huge step up followed, as Twenty One Pilots signed to Atlantic imprint Fuelled By Ramen and teamed up with Canadian producer Greg Wells (Katy Perry, Adele, Taylor Swift) for their third album, Vessel. The album was released in 2011 and went Platinum in the US. The band followed it up by touring with Fall Out Boy and appearing at Lollapalooza and Bonnaroo.When Twenty One Pilots returned in 2015 with Blurryface, they were on the brink of world domination. The album went to No.1 in the US and No.5 in the UK, going quadruple Platinum and Platinum, respectively. The band also contributed the track Heathens to the Suicide Squad soundtrack, earning a Grammy nod and a No.2 single in the process. Trench followed in 2018, topping the US Alternative Rock albums and going to No.2 in the US and the UK album charts. In 2021, the band released Scaled And Icy, recorded remotely during lockdown, which featured the hits 'Shy Away' and 'Saturday'. Later that year they performed four dates in London, including shows in Camden, Shepherd's Bush, Brixton and Wembley. 2023 saw the release of the MTV Unplugged, recorded at their show at Exchange LA, Los Angeles.In 2024 Twenty One Pilots released 'Overcompensate', the lead single from Clancy, the band's upcoming seventh album and last in their conceptual dystopian series. In March, the band announced UK and Ireland dates for April 2025 as part of The Clancy World Tour, calling at Birmingham, Glasgow, Belfast, Dublin, Manchester and London.
